EBS & Simon Communities of Ireland work together to help educate students on the root causes of homelessness

Minister for Education & Science, Mr. Batt O'Keeffe TD. Launches the 'Close to Home' DVD for secondary students

The Minister for Education and Science, Batt O'Keeffe TD, today launched the 'Close to Home' DVD at Larkin Community College, Cathal Brugha Street, Dublin 1. 'Close to Home' was developed by the Simon Communities of Ireland in partnership with EBS Building Society in an effort to provide secondary school students with a DVD which helps to outline in detail the root causes of homelessness and the kinds of steps that can be taken to help prevent people from becoming homeless. This is one of a number of projects that has been co-developed by the Simon Communities of Ireland and EBS Building Society as part of an ongoing campaign developed to reduce the level of homelessness in Ireland.

'Close to Home' DVD and resource pack comprises a 20 minute film on homelessness and the work of the 8 Simon Communities around the country. In the film, students get first person accounts of the difficulties faced by individuals experiencing homelessness and the help and support they have received from the Simon Community. The resource pack contains eight colourful information sheets on a range of topics such as 'Homelessness in Ireland', 'Health and Homelessness' and 'Pathways out of Homelessness'. The pack also encourages students to play their part in bringing an end to homelessness by organising a fundraising activity for Simon, or by discussing the issue of homelessness with friends and family.

Speaking to students at Larkin Community College, Minister O'Keeffe said: "It's very important that students are educated at an early age on homelessness and the preventative measures that can be taken to make sure this doesn't happen to them. In these tough times when part time work isn't as readily available to students as it has been some will already be feeling financial pressure. It is our responsibility as adults and mine as Minister for Education to make sure that all students are ready for the pressures of life ahead and I believe the 'Close to Home' resource pack, developed by Simon Communities and EBS, is an informative tool which will be of benefit to our students. I'd encourage all teachers to promote the pack among their students. I'd like to congratulate Simon and EBS for developing this initiative."

Chief Executive of Simon, Patrick Burke, commented saying: "The Simon Communities of Ireland has a long-standing tradition of working with students to encourage them to play a part in bringing an end to homelessness in Ireland and to educate them on the subject. The staff members and volunteers in the Simon Communities visit schools across the country on a regular basis to give talks explaining the issues around homelessness in Ireland, its causes and solutions. Furthermore, second level students have contributed significantly to our work by organising fundraising events. I hope that the 'Close to Home' pack will serve to further this tradition by helping to develop new relationships between second level schools and our Communities around the country and will educate them for their future lives as adults and prevent them from becoming homeless."

"I would like to thank Minister Batt O'Keeffe TD for helping us to launch the 'Close to Home' DVD and resource pack this morning. I also want to sincerely thank EBS for its support in developing this pack and its ongoing commitment to the work of the Simon Communities of Ireland."

Bringing the launch to an end, Aidan Power, Head of Marketing at EBS, said: "EBS is delighted to be able to partner with Simon on this great initiative. In Ireland homelessness is on the increase and in times of economic uncertainty it is even more important that we educate our children not just to prevent them from becoming homeless but also to encourage them to help those who are less fortunate than them. I believe the 'Close to Home' DVD and resource pack is a great tool for students and I hope all teachers around the country will support the initiative and encourage students to take the time to watch the DVD and read the leaflets. I would like to thank Minister O'Keeffe for his support of the project and to congratulate Simon for the development of the pack."

"EBS partners with the Simon Communities of Ireland as part of our CSR Programme, Positive Impact. The partnership was formed in 2004 and, together, we have succeeded in housing almost 100 families affected by homelessness through the Independent Living Initiative. We look forward to working on more successful programmes with Simon in the years ahead."

The 'Close to Home' pack will be distributed to schools around the country next September in time for the new school year. The pack can also be downloaded from the Simon Communities website.
